Annotated Bibliography

The UK Annotated Bibliography Writing Help

Annotated Bibliography accounts all the research being done on a given topic that would be listed in alphabetical order. Depending on the requirement, it either goes to large part of the dissertation, or it may be an independent piece of work. However, writing an annotated bibliography is a daunting task as before your start this part of the research, you need to undertake several activities. Firstly, you need to define the scope of work which would in turn help to identify what to include and exclude. Secondly, you need to see whether bibliography is part of research or independent piece of research? Thirdly, you need to develop sub-questions based on your main research questions. Fourthly, you should decide on whether you required journal articles or academic books or policy statement or government reports to write your annotated bibliography. Therefore, the student needs to step into all phases and skipping any step would significantly affect the quality of work.

Summary

Where we will summarize the content of the source in order to provide an overview of the argument but without judging the work. a. Under the summary annotations, there are two kinds, informative and indicative, where former summarize the content but less effort about the author. In the case of later, it provides real information about questions or issues addressed.

Critical evaluation

Just does not summarize but rather evaluate every part of the work critically and show how the work is different and its use in currently proposed a topic. In this part, we do an appraisal in two parts viz., initial appraisal and content appraisal. Under initial appraisal, a brief discussion on the author, date of publications, edition or revision, publisher and title of the journal would be reviewed. This is followed by content analysis, where content will be scrutinized in terms of audience targeted, methodology evaluation, objective reasoning, reliability and validity of the findings and personal conclusion about the source.
